

CPD credits and the NAC examination

A physician can expect to earn a total 9.5 hours of work as a physician examiner at the National Assessment Collaboration (NAC) examination per exam day worked (8.5 hours for exam day plus 1 hour of online orientation participation). Spare examiners earn 2 hours based upon the online training session time and physician examiner on-site time. Chief examiners earn 9.5 hours for every exam day worked.

Physician examiners' work typically includes but is not limited to:

- Providing accurate and standardized judgments while scoring candidates' performances on examination day;
- Troubleshooting any unclear points regarding the clinical content with the site's Chief Examiner(s);
- Participating in the on-line physician examiner training and receiving feedback for this scoring exercise;
- Providing feedback on the OSCE station content.

<http://www.cfpc.ca/uploadedFiles/CPD/Mainpro-Brochure-Updated-final-web.pdf>

Full Service sites

- CPD letters are sent by email to all examiners who participated in the NAC exam in December, for both the March and September sessions.

Partial Service sites

- Produce CPD letters for their examiners and can issue them after each session or once per year.

For more information on CPD credits, please visit the College of Family Physicians Canada (CFPC) and Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada websites:

<http://www.cfpc.ca/CPD/>

<http://www.royalcollege.ca/rcsite/cpd/royal-college-accredited-cpd-providers-e>